

DONATED ARCHITECTURAL RENDERINGS HELP SPUR CONSTRUCTION PROJECT FOR VETS

New Jersey, <insert release date> -- It's hard to imagine that an architectural rendering could change an injured service member's life forever, but in the case of Sgt. Mark Ecker and Sgt. Michael Downing, donated renderings from James Colucci Enterprises are a step in the right direction.

The Aftermath of War

The extended wars in Afghanistan and Iraq have left thousands of service personnel wounded and disabled. Coming home for many, though, provides little relief. From a lack of wheelchair-friendly flooring materials to inaccessible bathroom facilities, most single-family homes simply aren't accommodating enough for those who return with ongoing medical needs.

Sgt. Mark Ecker is one of the many service personnel whose combat-sustained injuries have left the idea of living in a traditional single-family home problematic. After suffering severe shrapnel wounds from an IED that was detonated inside a cinderblock wall, Sgt. Ecker lost both of his legs and will likely have ongoing rehabilitation needs.

Sgt. Michael Downing's story is harrowingly similar. Now a double amputee, Downing's convoy was hit by an IED in September of 2008. Still in Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Downing hopes to be able to play with his four children again soon, but the challenges his former home presents are insurmountable.

Enter Homes For Troops. An organization dedicated to providing accessible housing for injured service members and their families like Ecker and Downing, Homes for Troops was founded in 2004. It is a non profit 501(c)(3) organization that relies on the donations of individuals and businesses around the country to help service members in need.

The Beauty of a Picture

In many cases, architectural renderings signal an exciting new project, and behind every architectural rendering is a company like James Colucci Enterprises. Creating some of the most beautiful renderings in New Jersey, the firm has made quite a name for itself. Using the skills that have made it a thriving firm, James Colucci Enterprises is ready to give back by providing services to Homes for Our Troops and personnel like Ecker and Downing.

Construction One Step At a Time

By providing valuable architectural rendering services to the organization, James Colucci Enterprises will serve as an essential link in getting two homes from the drawing board to the construction site as smoothly as possible.

“I’m excited to be able to offer our services to the deserving personnel like Ecker and Downing,” says Jamie Colucci, president and CEO of James Colucci Enterprises. “We’re honored to be a part of the process of creating homes for those who sacrificed so much for our country.”

Another Life Changed

Revered by many as the single best real estate marketing firm on the East Coast, James Colucci Enterprises provides real estate photography, website design, architectural renderings, and much more to hundreds of professionals on a monthly basis. The rendering services they provide Homes for Our Troops will help the construction process begin on the homes for Ecker and Downing.

The Support They Deserve

Homes for Our Troops has worked with more than forty homes since the organization was founded in 2004. Each one is either built or remodeled at no cost to the veteran, and the construction relies on donations like the support they’re receiving from James Colucci Enterprises. Name as one of the “Top-Rated Veterans and Military Charities” by the American Institute of Philanthropy for their excellence, the organization is a leader in helping injured veterans reintegrate into society.

About James Colucci Enterprises: Since 1988, James Colucci Enterprises has been providing real estate marketing services to professionals around the country. Offering architectural renderings to suit any situation, photography services, virtual tours, interactive floor plans, website development, copywriting services, and much more, the firm continually helps redefine real estate marketing trends.
